Es tut mir leid, dass sie nicht 100% überzeugt waren von unserem Angebot und hoffe, dass wir Sie bei Ihrem nächsten Aufenthalt überzeugen können. Beim Buchen würde darauf achten ein Superiorapartment zu nehmen (4 Sterne, Internet am Zimmer [High Speed], Flat TV, Moderne Möbel uvm...)." The response is signed "Wuk Petrovic" and includes another disclaimer: "Diese Antwort ist die subjektive Meinung eines Vertreters des Objektes und nicht die von TripAdvisor LLC oder Partnerunternehmen."

More Info to Help you Identify the new FAKE SENNHEISER PX100

The Fake Sennheiser PX100 headphones from ebay, that likely got the seller "esalecenter" suspended last week, are pretty clever copies. I got stuck with some that fell apart right away. Here are some links I'll be refering to:

original thread where I discovered the issue HAPPY BIRTHDAY MRVILE!!!

bad auction <http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll...m=110155678667>

good auction for real PMX100 <http://cgi.ebay.com/ws/eBayISAPI.dll...m=320137926416>

I read elsewhere about identifying characteristics of some fake CX300 and PX100, after discovering that a set of PX100 which I bought for $17 for my daughters 14yr birthday were fake. They sounded like decent $25 headphones, but totally unlike my real PMX100's. That's when everyone suggested that I had some fakes, which I had never considered before (fake Rolex and Gucci, sure).

Anyway, I am sure my CX300 for $13.99 and came in a retail package are real - even though the same vendor sold them to me. I compared my CX300 to those in another thread that were fake and real, and these seem to be real. I am trying to find the link to the other "fake" threads to post here.

So, HERE ARE THE THINGS THAT SET THIS PARTICULAR FAKE APART FROM THE REAL THING:

- (1) For $17 I should have known they were fake, but they were advertized as new "Sennheiser PX100 Headphones Headset Earphones PX-100". The auction said it was new in a anti-static bag with Sennheiser sticker on the bag. I assumed they were actually refurb, but at that price I didn't care. IF YOU FIND THEM FOR UNDER HALF PRICE, or without the retail box and case, skip over them.
- (2) I am told the anti-static bag is another giveaway that these are fake.
- (3) The slider on the cord that makes the "Y" smaller/tighter is black instead of grey like the real ones.
- (4) The cord is only 49cm from earpiece to tip of the plug, and the real ones have a cord that is 55.75cm long. The extra length seems to be all in the "Y" part of the cord.
- (5) The fakes have a shiney black plastic headband, and the real ones have a matt black plastic.
- (6) More subtle findings, both real ones have a earpad about 1/32 thicker than the fakes, and the fakes have a more rounded profile to the sides of the pads when looking at them on edge.
- (7) The real ones have a one piece foam on the earpiece, the fakes look like they were made of two pieces of foam welded together and therefore have a circular seam around the circumference of the "ear side" that the real ones don't have.

The "S" Logo looks done correctly on the fakes, while I read that some fake CX300 had logo's that were off by a line where the S meets the box. The fakes have the same straight silver plug that the real PX and PMX100 have. The headband pads on the fakes are very slightly less plush. The sound is not terrible, but they are more bright with less bass than the real thing, although the bass seems to be somewhat extended for the amount of bass they have. If they hadn't fallen apart, I think my daughter would have liked them just fine on Thursday for her B-day. I have the extra pair of fakes that I don't want to give her, lest the embarass her when they too fall apart.

The fake, on the left in 1st pic are now the ones on the bottom, have the shorter 49cm cord.

Body

Islamabad, Pakistan - As the political crisis deepens in Pakistan, President Asif Ali Zardari offered an olive branch Saturday night to his main opposition rival, Nawaz Sharif. But the gesture failed to peel away Mr. Sharif's backing for a growing protest movement led by the nation's lawyers.

Instead, Mr. Zardari appears to face discontent within his own party following his government's efforts to suppress the protests.

Three high-profile members of the Pakistan People's Party (PPP) have broken ranks since the start of the lawyers' "long march" on Thursday.

The most dramatic departure came late Friday when Information Minister Sherry Rehman left the government without explanation. Ms. Rehman, a former journalist, resigned not long after the private cable TV channel Geo reported efforts by the government to block and move its signal.

Demonstrators gathered in front of the press clubs in Islamabad and Rawalpindi Saturday to show solidarity for journalists. The government has declared a ban on public gatherings, but police in and around the capital have not cracked down yet. Other suppression efforts include the arrest of activists and opposition party members, and the positioning of truck containers on roads to seal off access to the capital.

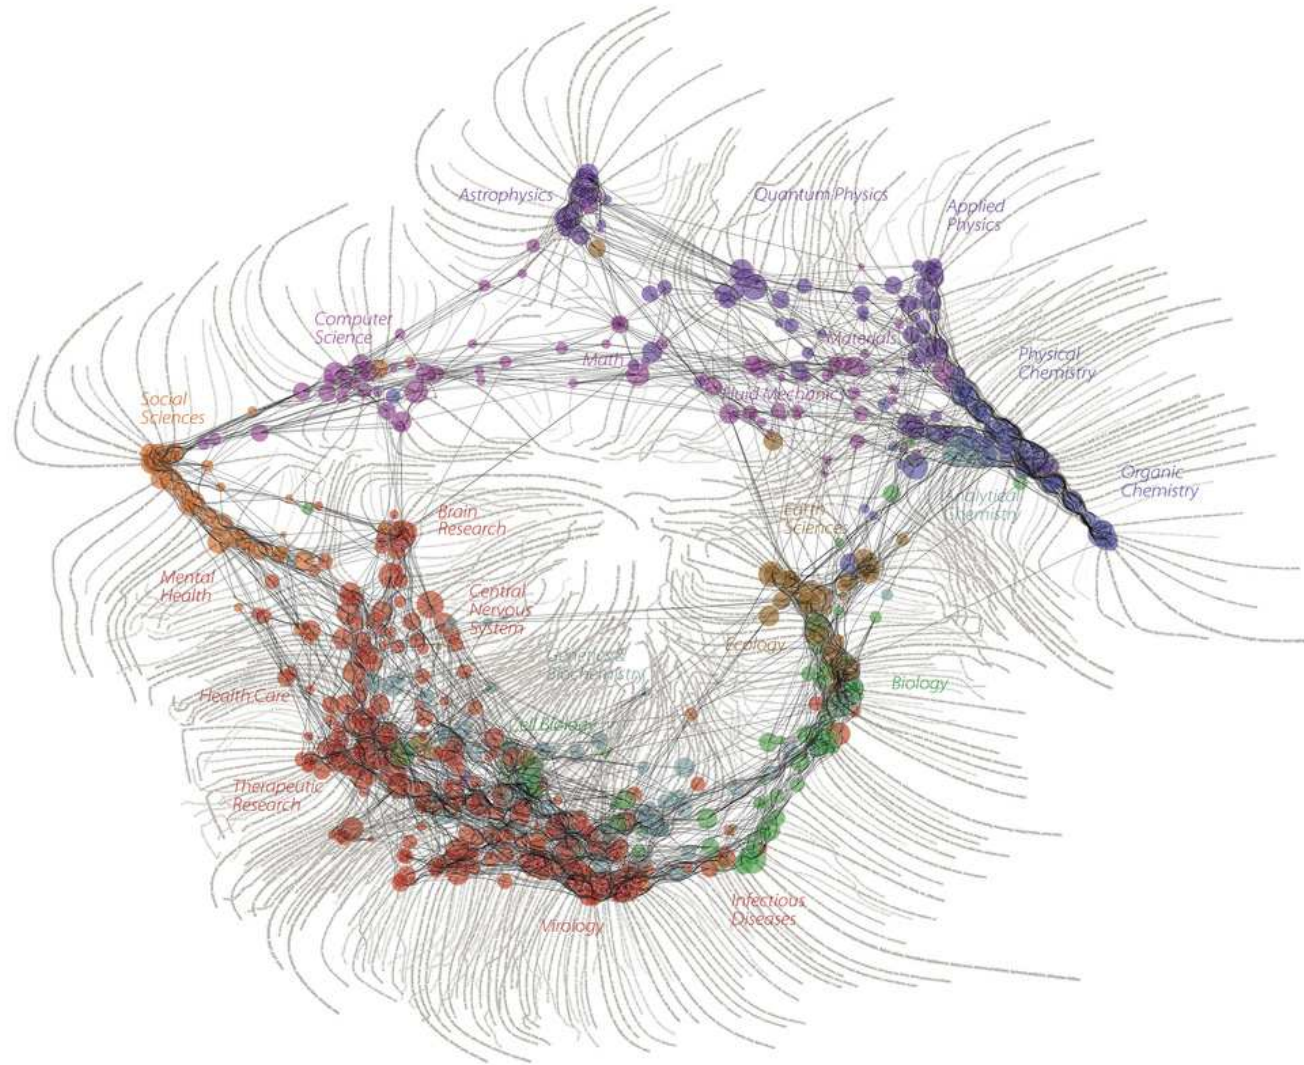

For some Pakistanis, these actions echo the efforts to stave off the return of civilian democratic rule during the waning days of the former military regime.

"I'm very surprised [Mr. Zardari] is using the same tactics because he was democratically elected. [Pervez] Musharraf was a dictator," says Mubeen Abbasi, a businessman attending an antigovernment rally Saturday in Islamabad. The rally, like others around the capital, was small – numbering
